

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mathematical model specifically for diabetes may be generated which may be continuous in time, in that there are no discrete time steps, and any event can occur at any times. The model may be generated using differential equations, object oriented programming, and features. The model may be used to simulate patients who have contracted or may contract type 1 or type 2 diabetes, which greatly improves the efficiency of treating patients and designing clinical trials.